To the Merchants of Virginia:
The commercial houses of Baltimore tender you their thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed in previous years, and beg to solicit a continuation of the cordial relations which have long existed between the mercantile interests of Baltimore and Virginia. You are invited to visit the Baltimore market and procure your stock of merchandise for the fall season of 1900.
Well established trade relations and direct means of transportation, social ties, and business advantages tend to draw the merchants of the Old Dominion and the Monumental City closer together.
In this market you will find large and varied stocks of goods of excellent qualities and at reasonable prices.
Recreation can be interspersed with business, as there are numerous mountain, river, seashore and suburban pleasure resorts within comparatively short distances of Baltimore.
The rooms of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association are centrally located in the midst of the wholesale district. You are cordially invited to visit these rooms, where you may comfortably tend to your correspondence, obtain information about the city, its points of interest, amusements and pleasure resorts, read the newspapers and meet your friends.
LLOYD L. JACKSON, President.
C. H. Forrest, Secretary.
